ating in ring mode, the central processor suppresses the carry between the third and fourth (from rightmost) bits if a self-indexing instruction is being executed. Thus, the Teletype Service Routine can store incoming or outgoing characters in an 8-word circular buffer and store (or fetch) the next character by using only a self-incrementing byte-reference instruction.